

Q. 1

Western Political thought, since its beginning from ancient Greece has dealt with diverse varieties of issues, and each philosopher has handled them from his own angle. The major issues relating to politics have been the concerns of political subjects the nature of political authority, and the character and utility of political knowledge. By attempting to find solutions at these only a political thought lies in the attempt of the political philosophers to

Q. 2

A nation is as great as it is free. An ideal state would be one in which government protects all in the enjoyment of what is theirs they may allocate the flow of capital to the national industries that are most will then productive and given? And from the on political corruption emerges and spreads. organized special interests market risks by seeking a safe bet or some thing favor government. special interests market risks by seeking a safe bet of some thing